COMMUNICATED. THOUGHTS ON A BEAUTIFUL OPAL. Thou peerless thing o' beauty, The star, among "The Stones!" Though the diamond and the ruby May flash from royal crowns. And amethysts and sapphires, With pearls and gems thereon, May steal Promethean fires From out the burning sun. Fragments of heaven's gilding Shaken from heaven's hoard, Struck off, perhaps, in building That "City made by God." Bright dew gems turned to stone,

Pure crystalled drops of light, Where Beauty's never done, Her revel of delight! But, in this sacred grotto, So trembling, calm and deep, We scarcely dare look at her, Lest we startle her from sleep.

As though the timid Peri, Having run the world abreast, Here, hunted down and weary, Were quivering into rest. Some beauteous magic rainbow,

Or sunset bright and warm, Let down for us below, Stamped with material form; As though some gentle fairy, Immortality 'd suggest, By folding visions airy Into such a tiny breast. This, makes thy charm, oh Opal !

The sweet suggestive thought Of that eternal tocal, Where the soul of beauty's caught, Where all the rays here bended, And made so far to sever. Shall thus be sweetly blended, And, gathered in, for ever.

Then another thought comes here, As thus we gaze at thee; It seems a miniature, Of what woman ought to be ! A brightness-yet not bright, As courting earthly gaze, But a quiet, inner light, Which shines, but does not blaze. The bright and sweet thus blended,

But no conspicuous charm! A "precious stone" intended, Man's talisman from harm; Like to the holy Ephod, Unto the Olden Priest, A thing most pure and sacred,

To be worn upon his breast! TARPLEY STARR. Clarke County, June, 1858. BEHIND THE AGE. Mr. Leonard made a successful balloon ascension from Montgomery, Ala., last week. He states that while "up," and but a short ment of Fancy Goods, such as Vases, most su- distance from the capital, he was shot at three perbly finished. All of the above goods must times by a Minnie rifle-in the bande of some be sold-and to Purchasers to sell again, it of one who probably took the zerial navigator ters great inducements.
